MISSING BATHER RETURNS.

DRIFTED TO SEA AND PICKED UP BY A FISHERMAN, HE SAYS.

Hollenberg's Tale an Amazing One, but His Wife Belleves It-His Rescuers Bring Him Home at Midnight and Disappear Says He Didn't Know Gray.

NEW ROCHELLE, Aug. 25 .- After being mourned for as dead by his wife and relatives. Henry W. Hollenberg, the missing New York piano salesman, who left his home in New Rochelle on Tuesday, Aug. 12, and whose clothing was found in a bathing house at Coney Island two days later, returned home at 1 o'clock this

He came back half starved, emaciated and delirious with fever, and told his wife that he was put ashere from a fishing chooner, which dropped anchor in the Sound off New Rochelle at midnight, and then sailed for New London.

Hollenberg dragged himself to the door of his cottage at 186 Woodland avenue, Residence Park, and knocked feebly for Mrs. Hollenberg, who has haunted the beach at Coney Island nearly every day since her husband disappeared, was asleep in an upstairs room with a young woman friend when she heard the knock. She sat up in bed and a moment later heard her husband's voice calling

She rushed downstairs and threw open the door, and a man staggered into her arms, whom she had difficulty in recognizing as her husband. His face was drawn and haggard, and he wore the rough clothing of a sailor. Mrs. Hollenberg says that he talked so incoherently that she became alarmed about his condition and feared to question him much. Hollenberg was put to bed at once and

Dr. Frank Littlewood, a New Rochelle physician, was called. Dr. Littlewood said to-night that Hollenberg is in bad shape and that several days must elapse before he will be able to see any one. He seems dazed and talks incoherently. Hollenberg has told part of his story to his wife and she reported it to a SUN reporter vesterday. He says that he knew nothing of James A. Gray of Brooklyn who was drowned on the day he disappeared, and whom it has been supposed was with him.

"My husband is in such a terribly nervous state," said Mrs. Hollenberg, "that I have not attempted to go into the details of his experience. All I know is what I have been able to pick up by sitting at his bed-

"He says that when he went in bathing at Coney Island he must have gone out too far, for when he tried to return he found that the tide was too strong and that it was carrying him out to sea. He fought with the waves as hard as he could, but after a while he felt himself sinking and became unconscious. He remembered nothing more until he regained conscious-ness a long time afterward, and found himself in a bunk in the forecastle of a boat.

"He afterward learned that it was a fishing smack from New London. My husband says that the sailors were very kind. They gave him water to drink, and some of their food. The only remark that he heard them make about his rescue was that he was clinging to a piece of spar about four miles out at sea, when they lowered a boat and cout at sea, when they lowered a boat and picked him up.

The boat was on its way to the fishing grounds, but Mr. Hollenberg wanted the captain to bring him back to New York, as he knew I would worry about him. The captain said that it would be impossible for him to turn back. He asked Mr. Hollenberg where he lived and when he found that his home was in New Rochelle said he would put in there and drop him ashore on the way back to New London.

"On Saturday the fishermen hauled up their nets and started back for New London. They offered to take Mr. Hollenberg to New York, but he asked them to bring him to Glen Island and they landed him there shout midnight on Sunday.

"Mr. Hollenberg was of course withou clothing, so they gave him a suit consist-ing of an old pair of trousers, a canvass jacket, an old pair of shoes and an oil skin

"My husband has not told me the name of the boat or the name of the captain, and I have not dared to question him. We will find it al. out, however, in a few days, ecause he gave his seal ring, a family to the sailor who brought hir ashore. He wanted to give the man some-thing and that was all he had, so he told him to bring the ring back in a few days and he would redeem it."

Mrs. Hollenberg ridiculed the suggestion that her husband might have been away on a spree and invented his story. She said that he is a man who does not average said that he is a man who does not average three drinks a week and was never under the influence of liquor.

"Why, when he came in this morning in a state of collapse," she said, "I went to a neighbor and borrowed a little brandy to give him, but he refused to taste it.
The only thing he would touch was a little coffee and milk, and then he sat up in bed long enough to tell us briefly about his experience. He was so shaky and feverish that I had to make him stop talking before he

There is one thing that I wish to deny emphatically, and that is that my husband ever disappeared from St. Paul, or that he was Henry W. Binckley, whom the papers say disappeared from Chicago in 1890, here he was stage manager in Hoyt' A Temperance Town.

"I know very well that he did not dis-appear from St. Paul because our engage-ment was publicly announced there. I was in Chicago and he came directly to that city, and we were married. I have aske his mother about the other report, and she says that it is untrue. She says that Mo Hollenberg was in business from 1833 to 1900 as a wholesale piano merchant with his brother, Col. F. B. T. Hollenberg, in Little Rock, Ark."

Little Rock, Ark."

The police of New Rochelle are inclined to believe Hollenberg's story. They say they know of no reason why he should disappear. Hollenberg's condition also bears out his story. Dr. Littlewood says that he must have passed through a terrible experience to transform him in so short a time from a big athletic man to a mental and physical wreck.

THE NEW MAINE A FLYER. Her Run of 410 Miles in Just Ten Minutes Over a Day.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 25 - The battleship Maine, fresh from her successful trial trip over the Cape Ann course, made a new record vesterday on her home-coming run between the Boston lightship and the Overalls lightship off the Delaware capes. The distance is 410 miles, and she covered it in exactly twenty-four hours and ten min-utes, her average speed for the run being 16.91 knots. Capt. Train, the President of the trial board, said that when all the corrections are made, allowing for the strong head winds encountered and the tides, to cial figures will show that the speed was about 18.3 knots.

Mayor Low's Jewish riot investigation committee held what probably will be its ast public session vesterday afternoon. as a great mass of testimony, much of which is merely cumulative, has been taken and the riot has been described to the committeemen from almost every point of Yesterday's session was held at 2 o'clock, the University Settlement Building, Rivington and Eldridge streets. Inspector Cross testified that he was strongly inclined to believe that the riot was precipitated by people in the crowd who were there for the express purpose of creating a disturbance, possibly with the idea of doing something n the pocket-picking line.

The Inspector said he had often heard of complaints being made by the people of the neighborhood of the conduct of the Hoe employees, particularly at the moon hour. He added that the complaints were of a trivial character.

Roundsman Jackson, who with Policemen Doupe, Merrill, Keenan and McKeon, are under indictment, recently found by the Grand Jury, for unnecessary clubbing and violence during the riot, was present at the investigation and Chairman Whitney of the committee said that the committee of the committee said that the committee of the committee said that the committee would like to hear his testimony. Foster L. Backus, counsel for Jackson and the four other indicated ones, stepped on the platform at this and said that following his platform at this and said that following his advice Roundsman Jackson would reserve his testimony for his own defence. Mr. Backus spoke at some length, and in the course of his remarks gave a new version of the possible origin of the riot.

He said that at five minutes before 1 o'clock every afternoon the Hoe factory bell rang and that meant that all employees must hasten to their posts of labor. It had it is the constant of the growth.

GAS MONOPOLY IN BUFFALO. Corporation Counsel Fighting Its 50-Cent a-Month Meter Charge.

BUFFALO, Aug. 25 .- For some time the Buffalo Gas Company, which has a monopoly of the local gas lighting business, has been making a so-called meter charge of 50 cents a month on all gas consumers. No bill for less than 50 cents a month was rendered, even if a consumer burned no gas, or if his nouse was vacant during the summer The company insisted that it was worth that much to have a meter in a house. Corporation Counsel Feldman issued tatement this morning advising all citizen to refuse to pay any more meter charge and promising protection in the event of trouble. The gas company is trying to close a five-year contract for street lighting with the city, and on Monday Mr. Feldman will advise the Common Council to break off all negotiations regarding this contrac inless the company discontinues the mete charge at once. The Common Counci-also will be advised to negotiate for differ-ent lighting facilities if this is not done.

The attorney for the gas company ha stated that unless the company gets thi lighting contract it will be forced wall, or will be compelled to charge a highe rate than $1 a thousand cubic feet.

NOT CRUELTY TO A HUSBAND

TO FORGE HIS NAME AND SPEND HIS MONEY EXTRAVAGANTLY.

Appellate Court Indorses the Refusal of Weaver's Request for a Separation on These Grounds-Wife Is Taken for Better or Worse. Says the Court.

Simon J. Weaver, a hardware merchant of Rochester, who sued his wife, Alice M. for a separation, alleging gross extravagance on her part and accusing her of forgery to raise money beyond his allowances to her, has failed, before the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in the Fourth Department, to reverse the decision of the lower court, which dismissed his com-

Weavers in 1888 he had allowed his wife $1,500 a year for family expenses. Weaver says his whole income from his business was only $2,000. He asserts that on June 9, 1900, he ascertained that she had forged his name to two promissory notes for $1,000 and $2,200, which she discounted at the Alliance Bank in Rochester. On her promise to pay the notes and not to forge his name again, Weaver says he indersed the two notes himself. She had them paid without Weaver's assistance when due. Weaver says she kept up writing his name and by Sept. 17, 1900, there were outstanding $11,700 of notes bearing his name, which his wife had uttered, and his credit had also been pledged to large amounts at different stores. He left the defendant on Nov. 12, 1900, and next day sued her for separation. "During the entire summer in which these forged notes were being uttered," says the Appellate Court, "the plaintiff and the defendant were living together. She had rented a cottage for the summer at Hemlock Lake, near Rochester, and he was with her there and also after she returned to their home in the city in the fall. While he was protesting against her extravagance and her forgeries there was travagance and her forgeries there was apparently no interruption of their pleasant conjugal relations. There were no quarrels and no family jars, and the suggestion is forced home that the plaintiff was more solicitous that she should pay the notes without calling upon him than over the turpitude of her conduct.

It is to be noted that the parties lived together in a style unwarranted by the allowance provided for the income of the plaintiff. They went considerably in society, kept a horse and carriage and appara-ety, kept a horse and carriage and appar

mother resided with them a good portion of the time, and their mode of life was that of fashionable people in affluence. "While the conduct of the defendant unquestionably produced a depressing effect upon the plaintiff and was galling and humiliating to him, it does not come within any definition of 'cruel and inhuman treatment,' which I have been able to find There is nothing to show loss of affection for the plaintiff; there is nothing to show that she intended to treat him cruelly o that she intended to treat him cruelly or inhumanly. We may not extenuate her crime, but there was no unfaithfulness to her husband intended. I find no case which holds the fact that the wife has committed a crime or been convicted of a felony warrants a decree relieving the husband from caring for her. "The fact that the defendant, in their lavish mode of living, exceeded the allow-ance awarded her by the plaintiff, and without authority made purchases at the stores and pledged his credit therefore, certainly does not constitute cruel and inhuman treatment. A husband takes his wife for better or worse, and because she does not conform her expenditures to his notions of economy is not a ground for cast

TWO WOMEN REPORTED IN DIS-PUTE WITH A TREASURY AGENT.

Niece of the Late Wilson G. Hunt, Associate of Cyrus Field in the Atlantic Cable Enterprise, Will Not Tell Just What Her Customs Trouble Was.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Aug. 25.-The story sublished to-day that a necklace valued at $20,000, which was siezed last Tuesday y Treasury Agent Theobald on the arrival of the Kronprinz Wilhelm, was the property of Miss Ellen D. Hunt of 42 East Fiftieth street, New York, caused considerable comment here to-day.

Miss Hunt and her niece, Miss Ellen Hunt Vanderveer, for whom the necklace is said to have been bought in Paris, arrived here last Thursday and are staying at the home of D. Augustus Vanderveer the brother-in-law of Miss Hunt and father of Miss Vanderveer. Miss Hunt is a niece of the late Wilson 3. Hunt, an old time merchant of New York and a member of the Chamber of Commerce. He was identified with Cyrus Field in the Atlantic cable enterprise and at his death several years ago left a large estate, the bulk of which descended to Miss Hunt, who had made her home with him for many years at the Clarendon Hote She has large interests in the Standard Oil Company and in the Chemical National Bank, and is said to be worth more than $1,000,000. Miss Vanderveer is a protegée of Miss Hunt's and has lived with her for veral years

She is a beautiful young woman and was introduced into society some time ago. She has been a belle at Newport ago. She has been a bene at Acapan and other resorts.

The women are very much annoyed by the publicity given the necklace affair and declined to be interviewed to-day, further than to say that the incident had further than to say that the incident had been greatly distorted.

Miss Hunt acknowledged that she had had some negotiations with Theobald, but she declined to say what they were. Mr. Vanderveer entered a general denial that there had been any intention to evade the customs laws. He said:

"There is nothing in the story. Miss Hunt."

HORSE DOCTOR BURROWS FREE. Justice Cochrane Orders the Belease of the Man Who Wouldn't Pay Allmony. Supreme Court Justice Cochrane, sitting in Brooklyn, yesterday ordered the discharge of Allen Burrows, the manufacturer of patent medicines for horses, who has spent the last four months in the Raymond street jail because he refused to comply with the order issued by Justice Marean, in granting Bay The order gave Burrows the choice be The order gave Burrows the choice between paying his wife a cash alimony of $20 a week, or turning over to her certain patent medicine orders, through which she might pay herself. Burrows refused to do one thing or the other and was put in jail for contempt of court.

In the decision accompanying his order Justice Cochrane said:

a decree of separation to Mrs. Burrows,

the present postmistress of Sheepshead

Justice Cochrane said:

The meaning of the order adjudging the defendant guilty of contempt, for not paying alimony was that at his option he might turn over to the plaintiff his orders in lied of making payment in money. It was not intended that he should do both. The defendant is imprisoned under a mandate, the one purpose of which is to enforce the payment of money. The fact that he has the privilege of making the payment in orderinstead of in money does not give the plaintiff the right to require him to do so, and the defendant having been imprisoned more than three months, the mandate under which he has been held has spent its force, and he is discharged. Justice Cochrane said:
